Performance Art Sculpture

A performance art sculpture displaying the constant risk of suicide which college-aged people in North Carolina are under. The hammer represents the risk of suicide, hovering over students (the college mugs). It could fall at any time, shattering the mugs. Behind the display, there is text collected about statistics regarding suicide, reasons why college aged people in North Carolina may have been suicidal, and reasons they chose to live. These are actual quotes collected from college-aged people, of whom two out of the three are UNC students.
