Affordable Housing Music-Driven Short Film

Our project is a music-driven short film that highlights the realities of affordable housing challenges in North Carolina through the voices of four individuals experiencing different struggles. The song is structured around the perspectives of a single parent renter, a man experiencing homelessness, an elderly homeowner facing rising costs, and a young professional struggling with rent and student debt. Each character shares their personal experience, leading to a climactic overlapping section that underscores the shared nature of the housing crisis.

We hope viewers take away a deeper understanding of how housing instability affects individuals and families from all walks of life. We also want them to recognize that this crisis is solvable through policy change, investment in affordable housing, and community action. The final section of the song introduces real solutions and calls to action, encouraging a push for meaningful change.
