Two Counties. One Reality.

Our project is a visual presentation that explores affordable housing through the perspectives of two fictional characters from different counties in North Carolina. By comparing their experiences with housing costs, employment income, availability, cost of living, and government policies, we aim to highlight the diverse factors that shape housing accessibility. We incorporated multiple perspectives to emphasize that, despite economic and geographic differences, the housing crisis is a universal issue throughout North Carolina. By illustrating these challenges through storytelling, we aim to help our audience gain a deeper understanding of the many factors that shape access to affordable housing.
