Our Homes Away From Home

People's views and knowledge about housing often differ based on their personal experiences, values, and priorities. How can you help others understand the complexities of affordable housing issues? To answer this question, we thought the best way to explain the complexities of affordable housing was through a children's book. This eliminated jargon, such as "redlining," so people of all ages could understand this issue. Although we did not use databases, we used our personal experiences to write this book. Then, we used Canva Dream Lab AI to illustrate our ideas. We hope this serves as a fun, informative way to educate people. Please enjoy this book as much as we did creating it!
